

Editor's Letter

This will be the third 'on-line' publication of the former Diocesan Magazine. Reaction continues to be rather muted but some of our indomitable contributors have continued to submit articles. The number continues to dwindle however - this time hitting an 'all-time low' of six.

Chris Todhunter in the Diocesan Office does a sterling job of printing off copies where necessary and our thanks to Chris for his help. This issue - no 87 - has, as before, .pdf files for downloading available below the .html files, on the selector page, so if you are looking for a download and can't manage the .html version, scroll down for the .pdf version and download what you need from there. The .pdf files also have illustrations in colour. Don't forget, however, that to open .pdf files you also need Adobe Acrobat Reader and usually this must be open and running on your computer. If you don't already have this, it is available free from many download sites. You can simply open Google and type in Adobe Acrobat Reader and you will be taken to different download sites, or I have provided a link to the main Adobe site (at the top of the .pdf files list) where you can quickly and safely carry out the download and installation.

I still live in hope (being a total optimist by nature!) that the many parishes that are not represented in this issue will recall that this is our only Archive of what goes on in the Diocese of Argyll & The Isles and will send in a report when the 'call goes out' for submissions immediately after Christmas 2007.

With every good wish,

Yours sincerely,

Bobby Sommerville

Hon.Editor.
